WHAT WE KNOW SO FAR

Cyrus Mistry, 54, and three others were traveling to Mumbai from Ahmedabad

3.15 pm

When the accident happened on a bridge (pic) in Palghar, about 120 km from Mumbai

Who was behind the wheel?
Dr Anahita Pandole, 55, a well-known gynaecologist in Mumbai. Alongside her was her husband Darius Pandole (60). Both survived the crash

How did the accident happen?
Their Mercedes Benz GLC at high speed was trying to overtake another vehicle from the left while negotiating potholes, when Dr Pandole lost control, local police officers said. The car crashed onto a road divider on a bridge

Were the front seat belts the saviours?
Appears so. Also the front airbags, as they opened on impact

What about the fatalities?
Mistry and Jahangir, brother of Darius, were in the rear. Both died. Were they wearing seat belts or not is a matter of investigation. But generally people in the rear avoid putting on seat belts. Even seat belts on the front seats are generally worn to avoid any traffic police hassle

GURBIR SINGH @Mumbai

ONE can't miss comparing the irony and tragedy of the death of Cyrus Mistry on Sunday afternoon with that of Princess Diana. The popular commoner-princess, just 36, died on August 31, 1997 along with her partner Dodi Fayed. It was from injuries she sustained in a car crash in a Paris tunnel. The memories of her tragic end were revived as the world mourned her again on her 25th death anniversary a few days ago.

Cyrus Mistry, just 54, died in similar circumstances. But there is more to the comparison. Cyrus too, like Diana, had conquered the world in his young and heady days; and both were castaways from their adopted families – Diana from British Royalty, and Cyrus from the Tata Group.

CYRUS MISTRY
4 July 1968 ■ 4 September 2022

Cyrus Pallonji Mistry, before he was anointed the sixth (and only the second non-Tata) chairman of Tata Sons in December 2012, was already in-charge of the large, $27 billion Shapoorji Pallonji construction empire. Born to Indian origin Parsis of Irish citizenship — construction magnate Shapoorji Mistry and Patsy Perin Dubash — Cyrus was very much a 'Bombay Boy' and schooled at the Cathedral & John Connon School.

He was just 23 when he joined the family construction business, and three years later, in 1994, became the MD of the construction behemoth founded by his father. By virtue of his family owning 18.4% — the largest single stake — in Tata Sons, he joined the board in 2006, and very quickly emerged as a close confidante of Ratan Tata.

Rahul accuses govt of weakening India through fear, hatred

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @New Delhi

CONGRESS leader Rahul Gandhi on Sunday accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi-led Union government of weakening the country by spreading fear and hatred, adding the Opposition was determined to defeat the RSS-BJP ideology.

Rahul, who returned from the UK on Sunday morning, was addressing a massive rally against price rise at Delhi's Ramlila Maidan.

"The fear of inflation and unemployment is increasing in the country, and due to this, hatred is rising. Hatred does not benefit the country, but it only weakens the country," Rahul claimed.

He accused the government of undermining India's independent institutions such as the media, the judiciary and the Election Commission.

Framing it as a battle of ideologies, Rahul said, "the Congress ideology and all other Opposition parties will together defeat the BJP and RSS ideology."

He also accused the government of working only to benefit Modi's "two industrialist friends".

The rally came ahead of the party's presidential polls and its Bharat Jodo Yatra. During the rally, Congress leader Adhir Ranjan Chowdhury urged Rahul to take over as party chief. Several party workers were seen carrying placards that said 'Rahul as Cong president'. G23 leader Bhupinder Singh Hooda, was addressing the gathering when Rahul arrived. Hooda promptly said, "Rahul Gandhi Zindabad."

The build-up for the Prince was complete.

Few takers for cow adoption scheme

ASHWINI M SRIPAD @Bengaluru

THE BJP government in the state, which is stressing on setting up goshalsas and safeguarding old and stray cows, is not getting many takers for its Punyakoti Dattu Yojane, a cow adoption scheme launched in July this year. Of over 33,000 cattle heads in the state that need care, only 152 have been adopted.

The state, in all, has over 1.14 crore cattle, including cows and buffaloes. To prevent them from being slaughtered, the state government passed the Karnataka Prevention of Slaughter and Preservation of Cattle Billl last year. Since then, the number of aged and ailing cows being sent to goshalas, being maintained by private organisations and the government, has increased.

To reduce the financial burden on such organisations and the government, and to encourage people's participation, the Department of Animal Husbandry came up with this scheme and also launched a dedicated website. The department has managed to collate data of 21,000 of the 33,000 cattle heads that are in goshalas. On the website, one can choose to donate to a goshala or adopt or feed a cow. One can donate as little as Rs 10 to a goshala, while the adoption of a cow comes at Rs 11,000 per year and feeding of a cow at Rs 70 per day.

Animal Husbandry Department sources alleged that the minister concerned, Prabhu Chavan, is not paying enough attention to the scheme, as he wanted it to be managed through a private trust. P4

Classmate's mom kills boy in rage over rank

After tiff with Gescom staff, cops lose power

AMIT S UPADHYE @ Hubballi

THE staff at a police station in Hosapete were in for a surprise on Saturday night when only their station was without power, while the rest of the town was fully lit up. It took some time for them to realise that some mischief makers within the Gulbarga Electric Supply Company Ltd (GESCOM) had cut power supply to them.

The policemen did not know that power to the station had been cut as the UPS was fully charged and the station functioned without a hiccup. Some of them came out and saw that someone had removed the power connection. But there was little bit of a history behind the prank. Earlier, some cops had warned Gescom officials against playing loud music during the Ganesha procession. P5

Park walkers drag Kalakshetra to HC

BANSY KALAPPA @Bengaluru

OVER 3,000 walkers, who are regulars at Cubbon Park, and members of the Cubbon Park Walkers' Association wanted to felicitate women achievers and young stars and had booked the Ravindra Kalakshetra auditorium on June 7 for the event to be held on October 9 by paying ₹24,373.

But the Ravindra Kalakshetra administration recently cancelled the booking without giving any reason. When the association members approached the administration officials, they were told that the directions came from the chief minister's office. They were informed that the government wants to hold an event on the same day as it is considered auspicious where a Union minister too is participating. Kalakshetra officials advised the association members to shift their function to October 23.

But the members told TNIE that they already have completed the preparations. P2

ADMIN SHOULD NOT INTERFERE

The advocate for the Association, Vijaya Kumar, has requested the high court to restrain Kalakshetra authorities from interfering with the bookings. The Association president said, "We approached various authorities and even the CM's office, but got no help."

Scan codes to know more about woody friends

BOSKY KHANNA @ Bengaluru

Just scan the codes on your mobile phones to know about trees in your neighbourhoods soon. The state Environment department is working on such codes for trees to give out information on their ecological importance which will help in better protection of the green cover in Bengaluru.

A senior department official told TNIE that the initiative will start on a pilot basis on a small plot in Bengaluru, and then, based on the response, it will be extended to the entire city.

Before developing the scan codes, the nature of trees, whether native or not, evergreen, their leaf shedding pattern, canopy cover and density will be assessed.

"Since Bengaluru is the IT hub, we thought of using technology to the optimum, by also involving citizens. There are 220-240 species of trees in Bengaluru. With the help of the ongoing tree census, we want to map the trees with their GIS coordinates, and also have scan codes," the officer said. P5
